LRC51 – Antique Silk Dressing

The antique silk dressing is designed to seal the leather after using the antique restorer creams, it locks in the colour and gives it a silky finish to the touch.

The Antique Silk Dressing is designed to seal over the top of the shoe creams and the antique restorer creams to give them a hard shell of protection.

They are fully water based and eco friendly products a bit like a standard clear coat but with a much softer finish and smaller particle size to give them a silky touch and feel.

With this silk dressing you can gain various sheen levels by spraying at different pressures, turning up the pressure but reducing the flow of the dressing will give a matter finish, turning down the pressure and increasing the flow will give a more sheen finish. It's a matter of playing around with the pressures and flow to gain different sheen levels.

With this type of dressing, you only need to apply two fine coatings, there is no benefit to overloading the product onto the leather.

The antique silk dressing can be applied by sponge if required using a natural sea sponge or the imitation sea sponge from our website. Here is a link to the sponge.

Application is easy be it via spray application or sponge application, with a sponge again two coats is all that is required simply stipple the antique silk dressing onto the surface do not over apply as this isn't any better, two applications is all that's required just ensure that all surface areas are covered with each application.

There is no need to thin this product as it's a ready to use product, thinning down with water will actually cause this product to break down quickly on the leather and the protection it provides won't last, its ready to spray or sponge as is.

This product can be used to cover other type of items as well as the antique creams, it can cover paint and the colour enhancers.

Once applied and dried this can be polished with 3,000 grit polishing paper, this does not need to be done hard, very gently draw the polishing paper over the surface to remove any imperfections you can feel in the surface.

Once cured you can then protect your leather surface with a protection cream or other forms of coatings but not a ceramic. Ceramics cause leather to dry out in time as it stops them breathing properly and causes fat liquors to dry up.
